14 NOV 1971

Approved For Release 2001/03/04 : CIA-RDP80-016 louse Study

By JEREMIAH O'LEARY Star Staff Writer

A House Foreign Affairs subcommittee staff study on Greece describes the U.S. Embassy in Athens as having "very low morale" because political reporting of embassy officers is subordinated to rescuing Ambas-sador Henry J. Tasca and his eareer from errors.

The document, prepared by taff consultant Clifford P. staff consultant Hackett after a one-month assignment there in August, was furnished to newsmen yesterday by Elias P. Demetracopoulos, an exiled Greek journalist.

Committee, staff administra-tor Roy J. Bullock confirmed the authenticity of the study, but said it was only an internal memorandum that has no status with the subcommittee on Europe.

Identification Deleted

rue supeommittee won't be President Spiro Agnew. (The very happy that you have this study was written before Agdoeument," Bulloek said. Demension new's recent visit to Greece tracopoulos declined to a recent visit to Greece tracopoulos declined to a recent visit to Greece tracopoulos. tracopoulos declined to say how he obtained the study from mer USIA employe with Europe-change even if ordered to do so, which he said he made copies, an experience and was an emflying to whom it was issued.

Greece in September 1970, Hack-rope. ett's study said, "The morale of ett's study said, "The morale of Demetracopoulos, the exiled the embassy seems to have de-journalist, criticized the present clined in direct proportion to the Athens government and U.S. falsity of the perceived trend military aid to Greece in testi(toward restoration of constitutional government by the Greek thal's subcommittee.

NATO.

A s
about the Greek thal's subcommittee. military dictatorship).

that there is general dismay in assignment was to obtain inforboth the embassy and in the mation on effects of American State Department in response to policy, military relations and the both this 'trend' which has now views of both the government proved illusory and to the politi- and the opposition on the future cal reporting from the embassy of American assistance. which served to reinforce what present ambassador's (Tasca's) istry.

ties, where assignment means proper American concern. service under an ambassador The study found that the who has seriously erred in his perceptions of political developments and where political reporting would be subordinated to the exigencies of rescuing that ambassador and his career from those errors."

The study said it was clear and the apparent American inathat the CIA and U.S. military aid mission in Greece continue to share a "sharply different since Ambassador Tasca arrived" section" on the political realiview from that of the political this divided embassy presides an ambassador now disabused of how much ambassa confinition of American aid. Here an ambassador now disabused of how much ambassa confinition or finite ambassa confinition of the first transfer of the first trans the regime's democratic intential that "nothing can change truly the regime's democratic inten-tions but sharing the political tions but sharing the political in American policy so long as section's pessimism about any the ambassador remains" and prospect of changing the sturdy how much to the evident invul-Greek dictatorship even if Wash-nerability of the military govington were to direct such a ernment. ington were to direct such a change,"

The prospect of a change from Washington, he declared, seems remote since the anthat Greek opposition leaders nouncement of the visit of Vice believe the United States could deleting only the number identi- ploye in the office of Rep. Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., chair-Since U.S. aid was resumed to man of the subcommittee on Eu-

Rosenthal initiated Hackett's "It is not exaggerated to state trip to Greece on July 22. The Hackett's study said he talked which served to reinforce what it lackett's study said he talked and gave away leverage when is now recognized as a false per-with about 20 opposition leaders, the U.S. embargo on arms for ranging from far right to ranging from far right to leftist-liberal, but that he spoke ical reporting has, in the judg-with only one representative of ment of several embassy offithe government, a middle-level cers, been tailored to fit the eivil servant in the foreign minpreconceptions of what he hoped would be a trend toward constitutional government.

"Athens is seen as a very unclassive call, told the committee staffer desirable post, despite its amenitation."

This man, who Hackett said was suggested to him as appropriate for making a courtesy call, told the committee staffer desirable post, despite its amenitation.

American Embassy political section was distressed at what was called the "steady development of the military government and the apparent American inasinee Ambassador Tasca arrived

Hackett reported to the sub-Amid this "general dismay," committee that Tasca's initial Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added," over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added," over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added," over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added," over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added," over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added, "Over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added," over resumption of American sid Hackett's study added study eommittee that Tasca's initial

Views in Opposition

Hackett found a paradox in exert a nearly decisive influence on the longevity of the regime while embassy staffers believe Washington couldn't prompt a Tasca, a 58-year-old career diplomat and former ambassa-dor to Moroeco, assumed his post in January 1970. A native of Providence, R.I., he has been a deputy assistant secretary of state for African affairs and has served in Bonn, Rome and with

A similarly critical report about U.S. foreign policy toward the Greek military government was issued by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in a staff report in March. The report said the State Department and the embassy in Athens gave too much credence to junta statements that parliamentary government would be restored and gave away leverage when STATINTL